The Scorecard

April 2014

Dear Members of Jeremy Ranch Golf & Country Club,

It is my pleasure to formally announce the official name change of our club to Jeremy Ranch Golf & Country Club. Over the past 6 months, the Board, Landscapes Unlimited and the management staff at the club have been working on updating our image and brand. It was decided early on, that we wanted to return to the name that was made famous years ago by some of the greatest golfers to ever play the game. In this process, we also looked at modernizing our logo. For this, we turned to Josh Footer, a Jeremy Ranch member and owner of Twio Brand, a marketing company out of SLC. After many revisions, Josh and his team presented us with a concept that was unanimously approved. The new logo concept incorporated the emblems of our original Jeremy logo in an up to date modern form.

We asked Josh to describe the process he and his team went through to ultimately end up with our new designs. "The new Jeremy Ranch logo showcases the two omnipresent features of the course - the mountains of Park City and the winding stream. In looking at the attached photo (see below), we matched the curves of the stream as it winds through the heart of the back-nine. The "V-notch" in the middle of the mark also matches the shape of the opening of the road to East Canyon just past the 6th green / 7th tee. The overall shape of the mark - a hexagon - contained all of the mark's elements well and will be a very cool tee marker. For the typography, after cycling through countless options, we landed on a serif "Park City-esque" font that is both readable and re-produces well on merchandise. Overall, the combined new Jeremy Ranch identity has flexibility in that it shows well in its entirety - both logo + wordmark - but also in individual pieces which gives the Club multiple options for communicating the best that The Jeremy has to offer."

From The Greens

As many of you have noticed early in December our maintenance staff cleared the greens of snow in order to try and remove a layer of ice that had formed on our greens. Winter damage can be caused by a number of factors but injury related to ice cover has been a particular problem here at Jeremy Ranch. Our little valley, although beautiful, creates a very unique climate for our golf course. Much of our course is on a north face or is shadowed by north facing slopes. The majority of the course is located in the valley bottom with a river running throughout the course. These factors all play a role in colder, longer, wetter winters at Jeremy Ranch. This problem is exacerbated when the predominant grass species on our greens, which were built over 30 years ago, is annual bluegrass or poa annua. Many other courses in the area are located with southern exposure or on mountains and hills where water runs away from the course, not through it. This creates warmer spring conditions and normally earlier openings.

We realize that it is very difficult to remove ice early in the winter; the decision was made to act and get the ice off as soon as possible. Snow was removed with a bobcat and backhoe, black sand was spread to increase temperatures on the surface and squeegees were used to remove water from the greens once melting had started. Several other methods were used to speed up the process but had limited success.

By the end of January the greens had all been cleared of snow and ice. We are hoping that our efforts have helped prevent some damage but at the same time we know that there is a significant amount of turf loss on our greens.

Our plan going forward is to get on the golf course and repair the damage as soon as Mother Nature will allow. We have purchased a new ProCore Aerator that will allow us to get tighter spacing on our spring aerification. This week we received our purchase of bent grass seed. Once the ground temperatures reach average temperatures in the 50's we will seed all our greens and cover them with greens covers to speed up the germination process. We are anticipating this will be complete and the course is open by mid-May. We are planning to open the course on temporary greens as soon as Mother Nature will allow so members can get out and start tuning up their games.

On a positive note, we are going to utilize this down time to re-build many of the uneven tee boxes around the course. We have plans to renovate many of the tee boxes on the front nine, including the whole tee complexes of #4, #8 and #11. You should start seeing this work beginning early next week.

Thanks for your continued patience as we work to improve this great golf course. If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to call either of us anytime.

Thanks again,

Tip From Your 1st Assistant

Corey Wooley, PGA ~ 1st Assistant Golf Professional

It's Good to be Square!

It is hard to find someone who doesn't want a couple extra yards off the tee, or to hit the ball straighter. Having the club head square at impact is one of the main contributors to a straight, long golf shot. If your club head is open or closed, or the club path coming through the ball is inside-out or outside-in, then you aren't maximizing your impact efficiency on the ball, thus losing valuable yards off the tee as well as hitting the ball in an errant direction.

I hit some drives in the simulator to show just how much distance can be lost by having the swing path off only a few degrees. The following screen shots tell us everything we need to know. Note that the club head speed is identical in both shots.

The two numbers on the bottom-right are what we will focus on. Notice that the club face is relatively square on both shots, but the second shot has a club path of 4.3 degrees inside-out, whereas the first shot was only 0.8 inside out. This means that I came across the ball more at impact instead of driving the club straight through the ball. This minor but curable error cost me 12.5 yards in the air (carry yards). That is over 3% of the distance of the shot, which means for amateurs who hit the ball 200 yards, they are losing about 7 yards! Looking at ball speed, the shot that was hit with a relatively square club face and path traveled 6.6 miles per hour faster off the club face, which resulted in more distance.

What does it all mean? There are yards to be gained by maximizing the efficiency of your current golf swing. Optimal club path and club face angle can be achieved with only minor tweaks to your swing. So, next time you are in the simulator and just aren't getting the yardage off the tee you think you should, pay attention to these numbers and they may spell out the problem for you, and we can work on how to fix it.
